Role of the Family

As an infant and toddler caregiver, you want infants, toddlers and families to feel welcome and to form strong relationships in the early care and learning setting. You also recognize the importance of keeping infants and toddlers connected to their families when they are with you. Check off all of the ways in which you feel families can be involved with you and the program:

- Gathering and sharing information about their infant or toddler through observation and conversations
- Planning experiences and activities for their infant or toddler within the care setting
- Planning strategies to support their infant or toddler’s development and learning
- Attending training on topics related to infant and toddler development
- Providing feedback on the care setting
